If you copy the next few lines of code, you can make a new task called "Midterm" like so @startuml blank -> import "www.basic2.com/shiny/ports/tasks.uml" as Task; [ ] new Task["Midterm"]; @enduml In order to assign the task to someone, you would create a new blank container and drag that person into it. If I copy this data into R, and then turn it into a data frame, the task assignment is recorded. In order to be able to monitor which tasks are being done and when, I added new blank containers called "Progress" and "Completed". Each time a task is assigned, that changes the "Progress" state. When the task is completed, the "Completed" state takes on the new value. The next box is

A compacting machine of the aforementioned type is known from Swiss Pat. No. 566,136, corresponding to U.S. Pat. No. 4,293,055, granted Oct. 6, 1981. In the compacting machine of the aforementioned Swiss publication, the material is moved from a transport pallet to a compactor at which compaction occurs, wherein the material is compacted as it leaves the compactor. To this end, the compactor has a mobile compaction body having a pile of compacting means lying thereon. The material is located upon the pile of compacting means at the beginning of the compaction and the compaction is completed through the exchange of the pile of compacting means for a new pile. The compaction process is carried out such that a mass of material is compacted or broken down into several portions during the last lifting step or press-down step. The masses of material are broken down until in the last lifting step no material is left. The compacting body is mounted in a vertically movable manner on the machine frame and is provided with vertically moveable compaction means. Although the compacting machine of the aforementioned Swiss publication is capable of satisfactorily achieving its intended purpose, it has been observed that the compacting body with the pile of compacting means is moved by a particular device. This requires complicated design and production costs for the compacting machine. In the compacting machine for compacting a mass of material of the aforementioned Swiss publication, a substantial part of the compacting work lies in the receptacle receiving the material to be compacted. The receptacle is removed completely from the machine frame in the case e79caf774b

The Spaniard shot out to a lead in the final few minutes of the bout but subsequent contact with his team-mate Nicky Catsburg sent the car over the wall at La Chine sur L'Eau as the duo were battling for the lead. This reversed Tarazed's fortunes as he was handed a ten-second penalty for the dangerous move but it was enough to see him drop to third in his first race of the season. Ligier - who had planned to retire from the contest after being passed by team-mate Ken Block - went on to complete the podium as third-placed Daniil Kvyat finished second. Tarazed said he was pleased with the weekend's result: "Overall it is quite a positive day, but we have made a big mistake in the last corner. We are not here to make mistakes and we will learn from this." Paludo could only finish a season best fifth place after another uncharacteristic moment of error. The Chilean admitted: "I am a bit confused as to why we are not able to complete a victory, but at least we are second." The pair return to action at the final round of the series in Hell in Sweden on December 20-22. Tarazed & Ligier's complete resultsMass flow controllers (MFCs) are generally used for accurately measuring the flow rate of fluids, including gases. They are based on the Venturi principle and measure the mass of the fluid (e.g. gas) passing a given known orifice. For the determination of the mass flow rate of the fluid in the flow path a known volume of fluid is introduced through the flow path and the mass of the fluid, that has passed through the flow path is determined and measured. Such devices are required for example
